Time tery's March.

The story of Stanley's march from the Congo across to the lake known as Albert Nyauza, which makes the head waters of the Nile, is more wonderful than anything in the history of exploration. It is related in his letter to a friend in Edinburgh, brief by mentioned last week. Stanley's route led him down a bend in the Congo until he struck the cartlet of the Arawhimi, a tributary of the Congo, which takes its rise near that the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the Seante Chamber, where he took his seat and the seanters and representatives their seats. The prairie fires in southeastern Dakota last feet of plawed ground and continued or their career of destruction. All ordinary precautions were in vain. The spring has been very dry, and the top of the ground has been dusty or baked. The signal observer at Yankton says that the humidity of the air was but seven per cent Tuesday -a state of dryness never before attained. As the mean annual humidity is 70, this shows that the atmosphere was practically devoid of moisture. Then the wind from the northeast blew between 10 and 50 miles an hour, faming the flames into fury. Un-der these conditions, wherever fire touched the grass it burst out with a flash and shot

The cabin was surrounded by 15 redskins, who rushed upon the door, firing at ran-dom. Williams remained undurt, and, taking a Colt's navy revolver in either hand, opened upon the savages. His aim was sure, and every shot spoke the death of a redskin. Ten shots had been fired by him and ten Indians lay dead, when a pan seemed to seize the other five and they best a hasty retreet. Williams then seized a double barreled shot gun, heavily loaded with backshot, and emptied both barrels into their midst. Vermont G. A. R. has insued an appeal asking the Vermont veterans to contribute money for a tablet to be placed in the Ben nington battle monument. Of all organizations, he says, this one should have such a memorato. The Old Fellows, the Masons, the Good Templars, and the historical soci-stics are all moving to place tablets there-some have already contrasted for them, and those who have not will at once do so. The cost will be $400, and the money must be raised by May 1. Col. Tracy hopes the Woman's Rollef corps and the Sons of Vet-erans will also have tablets placed in the IN GENERAL.

Deer and elk are literally massacred in Wyoming and Western Colorado by wealthy Englishmen who come over to enjoy the sport. The great herds along the "continental deer trail" are being rapidly depleted by this useless slaughter. Men who belong in the region will not kill an animal except to use it, and will pass by whole herds without firing a shot.

He asked for more time, but was told that it must be there before night. Inquiry developed the fact that it is a custom of the Hapsburgs always to have a coffin in the house. The oak coffin in which the body of the Crown Prince lay was one that had been made years before, after the death of one of his relations, and had waited for an occupant over since. The new one is now waiting. A very pathetic story is told by Darwin in the life of his grandfather, Dr. Darwin of Derby. One day a patient entered the consulting room of a London physician and detailed the symptoms of his illness. It was an obscure and difficult case, of a kind that was only imperfectly understood, and the London doctor confessed himself fairly puzzled. He could only say that the patient

The mortality of the Chinese residing in New York is great er, in proportion to their number, than that of any other race, though most of them eat American food. They are apt to find our American food. They are apt to find our climate a little hard upon them. A well-informed Italian resident of this city recently said that most of his laboring countrymen here live at an expense of not more than forty cents a day, and hoard what they may earn beyond that sum. The Hohemian cigarmakers, who number thousands, are compelled by necessity to live as cheapily as possible.

an answer with positiveness. The proba-pilities, however, overwhelmingly favor the tion that at least some of the inni merable heavenly bodies are the abole of life, and of life in its intelligent forms. To suppose otherwise would be utterly incon-sistent with all we know of the economy o uature. Or, if we adopt the orthodox re ligious view, it seems irreverent to sup-pose that the Creator would have constru-ed the stapendous machine represented by the planets and the stars all for no usefu purpose. Certainly it would be for no use ful purpose that human understanding car discover, if the countless millions of heav enly bodies were made merely to roll through count of their creation given in the book of Genesis: but to suppose that He made them mersly to twinkle in our sky at night, when another moon would have answered the purpose much better, is like supposing that all the electric lights of Boston were made to light one polestrian to his home—the contrivance is so vastly and cumbrously out of proportion to its object. And, reasoning from the common sense point of view, what edge may never process for enough t edge may never process far enough to give a positive answer to the question whether other worlds than ours are inhabited, but it is entirely reasonable to appose that they are. Some of them, however, we may be prefty sure are not now inhabited, their conditions not being favorable for the support of life such as is known on our own planet. Some are too hot, some are too cold; some are of such mass that any terrestrial animal, man or heast, would be crushed to death with his own weight, and others of such light gravity that a summor suphyr might blow a man up into the clouds. In the case of the planet Veinus, which is now so luminous an object in the heavens, the probability that it is the home of animal life, if not human life, is stronger than in the case of any planet in the solar system sacepting Mars. It has been objected to this theory that Veinus is only 60,000,000 miles distant from the sun, while the earth is 91,000,000 miles distant a and therefore Veinus receives from the sun a greater amount of leat than the earth receives. > Editor of The Physic: I wonder the wonderful beauty of this quiet village thither for the first time a few days since and, reports for the benefit of your read ers. It is indeed the quaint, picturesqu ted it, and a place in which to dwell when come the summer days" and the very pleasant trip, making 82 miles. This place seems to have all the elements to be desired in a popular summer resort, which it is destined to become when it shall be better known. The bathing, fishing, gun ming and bathing are all good, while the 'views," both by land and sea, are of the finest description, and furnish much mate-rial for artists who visit there during the I am told there has been of transfer of property there of late, which cannot fail to give an impetus to travel in that direction. This is none other than the de to a Boston syndicate of about 100 acres of the chaicest scashors property, in-cluding the famous locality known as Tay-lor's Hill. Upon its summit, standing high above the surrounding country, it is proposed to build a large and commodious hotel something which has long been needed and the want of which has very much retarded the progress of the place. Below and around the hill the land will be out into lots and old to summer cettagers, many of them awing been engaged in advance of their eadmess. On the market I understand here is a great demand for these lots, and all to a good class of purchasers.

Thinking some of your readers, in look-ing about for a summer home, might find in Wellflest much to please and attract them nors, in fact, than elsewhere is the of OBSTRVER. ton, April 5th, 1889.

His hair was dressed and pow-dered in the fashion of the day and worn in a bag and solitaire. Chancellor Robert R. Lavingston, one of the committee of live to draft the Declaration of Independare thirtien years before, was dressed in a full suit of black cloth and wore the robe of office. Just before the oath was to be diministered it was discovered that no Bi-ble was in Federal Hall. Luckily Livingble was in Federal Hall. Luckily Laving-ston, a Grand Master of Free Masons, knew that there was one at St. John's Lodge in the city assembly rooms near by, and a messenger was dispatched to borrow the Bible, which is today the property of St. John's Lodge No. 1, the third oldest Masonic lodge in the United States. "Secretary Ois of the Senate held be-fore him a real velvet cushion, mean which fore him a red velvet cushion, upon which rested the open Bible of St. John's Lodge. 'You do solemnly swear,' said Livingston, that you will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of your ability, preserve, protect, and defend the constitution of the United States. "I do seleunly swear," replied Washington, that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the Unitod States, and will, to the best of my abili-ty, preserve, protect and defend the con-stitution of the United States.
